HISTORIC DESIGNATION FOR WINERY

Galleano Winery received official notification in September that it was honored in May of this year by being named to the National Register of Historic Places. This is the United States' official list of historic resources worthy of preservation. Placement on it includes the Winery in a significant group of special properties throughout the country.

“We are pleased and honored to be named to the National Register,” said Don Galleano, owner of Galleano Winery. “We’ve always believed that, in addition to our award-winning wines, the Winery offers an interesting historical experience for our customers. We are thrilled with this recognition and look forward to welcoming new visitors who also have an appreciation of places of historic value.”

Together with the national designation, Galleano Winery will also be noted in the California Register of Historical Resources, an authoritative guide to significant resources within the state.
